—Christian Meyer Post Grand Army of the Republic is doing all in its power to make the exercises of Memorial Day not only interesting, but a success. All old soldiers and the citizens throughout the county are invited to participate.
—We regret very much that our Forest City correspondent failed to send us a report of the high school literary entertainment. We have heard it highly spoken of, and we hope our "pencil pusher" of Forest, will send us all such items.
—E. P. Hostetter has just fitted up his ice cream parlor in elegant style, and invites the public to give him a call when they want a nice dish of cream, cake, or a cool glass of lemonade. He will furnish ice cream and cake for receptions, parties, etc., on short notice.
—The wives and relatives of the members of Christian Meyer Post Grand Army of the Republic of this place are at work making arrangements to serve a dinner in the Court House park on Memorial Day. The proceeds to be given to the relief fund of the Post. It is hoped all our citizens and visitors will take dinner with the ladies on this day, thereby contributing to a worthy cause.

—A very pleasant surprise party was given Mrs. Daniel Kunkel, Sr., last Tuesday, May 22nd, it being the occasion of her 60th birthday. She had been lured off the day previous to visit friends, so that those engaged in the surprise could have everything arranged, and on her return home the next day she was completely surprised at finding the table spread and about sixty guests awaiting her arrival. A most enjoyable time was had, and THE COUNTY PAPER joins with her many friends in wishing her many more such happy birthdays.
—We hope that Craig will send a large delegation to Oregon on Decoration Day, May 30. The people of Oregon will endeavor to entertain all who attend and we hope every old soldier will go and show flowers on the graves of their fallen comrades, who fell fighting for their country. We must not forget those who fell defending the Nation and it is our duty to gather on the day set apart for that purpose and beautify their last "camp ground" where they await Gabriel's "reville" which shall call them before the Grand Commander to be mustered in to life eternal.—Craig Meteor.

BRIDE FOR A DAY.
St. Joseph Herald.
Yesterday's Herald contained a brief mention of the marriage of Robert Bishop and Katie Smith, which occurred at the Saunders house Wednesday evening. Interest attached to the event on account of the fact that the bride was young and handsome, while the groom was about thirty five years of age and totally blind. A sequel to the occurrence was developed yesterday, which created a sensation among the guests at the hotel. A Herald reporter called upon the bride last evening and heard her story, which is substantially as follows: She formerly resided with her parents at Oregon, Holt county, but some time ago her father and mother separated, the latter going to Nebraska. The girl states that she went to Forest City and obtained employment in a hotel. Two weeks ago the blind man Bishop came to the hotel and engaged board. He had plenty of money and wore a gold watch cost him sixteen hundred dollars. She says she took compassion upon him, on account of his misfortune, and when he proposed to make her his wife she consented. They came to St. Joseph and Bishop registered the two names and they were assigned to separate rooms. During the day they went out on a shopping tour, visiting numerous dry goods and jewelry establishments, millinery stores, etc. It was her desire to obtain some new dresses and other articles of wearing apparel before getting married, which they had planned to consummate in about a week. He approved this idea and requested her to select everything that she desired, regardless of cost, and was even more extravagant than she in his notions as to what should constitute the toilet of a bride. She selected two silk dresses and other articles to correspond, and he ordered a jeweler to make an elegant wedding ring for her. None of the purchases were completed, but in the afternoon they returned to the hotel, he explaining that in the morning they would make another tour a day get the goods. Arriving at the hotel she went to her room and he left the house alone. A little later she was surprised at his return, in company with a justice of the peace, and she was not prepared to get married at the time, but he insisted upon it, explaining that as he lay in the morning he would go and get a ready made silk dress to which she had taken a fancy during the day, together with such accessories as might be necessary to complete her bridal toilet, and she could appear with her trousseau complete. After some persuasion she yielded and Justice Mitchell pronounced the words that made them husband and wife. In the meantime he had taken away all the trousseau, containing all his personal effects, ostensibly to have his clothing cleaned. Yesterday morning they had an early breakfast, and he went out to look after his clothes and also to make the purchases that she desired. He regretted that she could not accompany him, but it was raining, and it was deemed best that she should remain indoors. That was the last seen of the blind bridegroom. She waited impatiently for his return, and conjured up many cute little expressions of childing that she intended to employ when the naughty boy did come back. She nursed her impatience alone, until nearly noon, when a message came to her through a bell boy that her husband was engaged in doing some trading down town and could not come to dinner. He desired that she should go to dinner alone, and, stated that he would join her at supper time. In the afternoon her suspicions were a used, and she informed the people at the hotel of all that had occurred. Rumors were then sent out in all directions, but no trace of the blind man could be found. The depots were visited, but nobody had observed him there. Telegrams were sent inquiring about him, but no favorable responses were received. The bride was in great distress, and especially after discovering that the fellow had not only deserted her but had also taken her pocket-book, containing all the money she had. He had ordered his trunk shipped to this point, and she thinks he secured it also, and left the state. Nothing is known concerning his history or family connections, except that he claimed to have a sister in Iowa. The girl states that she is going to Forest City to day, but will return to this city and obtain employment. She does not know what is best to be done with the departed, but if she can ascertain his whereabouts she will either cause his arrest or compel him to give her a share of his money. There is a suspicion among those who saw him on the streets that he is not blind, but the girl insists that this cannot be true.
